

Jeremy Greenwood

Most recently I have been providing background historical research for the English Heritage funded New Forest coastal zone rapid assessment and prior to this I was in the department of Medical history at Exeter University although I am theoretically retired!

Whilst most of my career has been spent as a healthcare professional, after taking early retirement, I have been engaged in research in maritime history; particularly the economy of the littoral area of the northwest Solent and its maritime trade connections. Previous research projects have included family reconstitution for the Cambridge Group for the History of Population and occupational structure of urban centres in southeast England for the Urban history centre at Leicester University.

I have published widely; most recently Post medieval salt production in southeast Hampshire (2010) and Placenames used in Reigate and Redhill (2011).
