

Maria Sirago

Since September 1st 1987 permanent State teacher of literary subjects at “Liceo Classico Jacopo Sannazaro” in Naples; 1989- 1990 Scholarship by the Spanish Ministry of Culture, in concert with the Italian Foreign Ministry; Academic year 1994-1995 Specialization Course The Mediterranean in the Age of Discoveries. Economic Impact, held at the Faculty of History and Geography at Valencia Universit. She has been studying maritime history in its different aspects, carrying out, in particular, studies on the Southern Italy port system, on Southern Italy Navy in Spanish, Austrian and Bourbon periods, on merchant ships, on maritime insurances, on trade, on naval schools and on fishing systems. As a result of these studies, she has published various essays and three monographic studies: one on the naval school of Piano di Sorrento (18th century), one on Gregorio Carafa, General of the Fleet and Grand Master of the Order of the Knights of Malta and one on Naples and on Southern Italy coastal centres. Continuation of studies on Southern Italy Navy in the Spanish period; resuming studies on Caracciolo and his disciples as well as on their contribution to Bourbon Navy; resuming studies on fishery, in particular on Southern tuna-fishing boats, studies on Sorrento and Amalfi economic society in the modern period.